

Sally's Flowers by Kate Pederson

Once there was a dinosaur that loved flowers. Her name was Sally. And she loved them every time she came out. it made her so happy with all of the flowers. There were pink and yellow and red and even purple. Once she put them in her hair.

She put flowers on the other dinosaurs' porch. Then they were surprised and didn't know who they were from. There were roses and violets and the other dinosaurs were very happy and they loved her so so much.

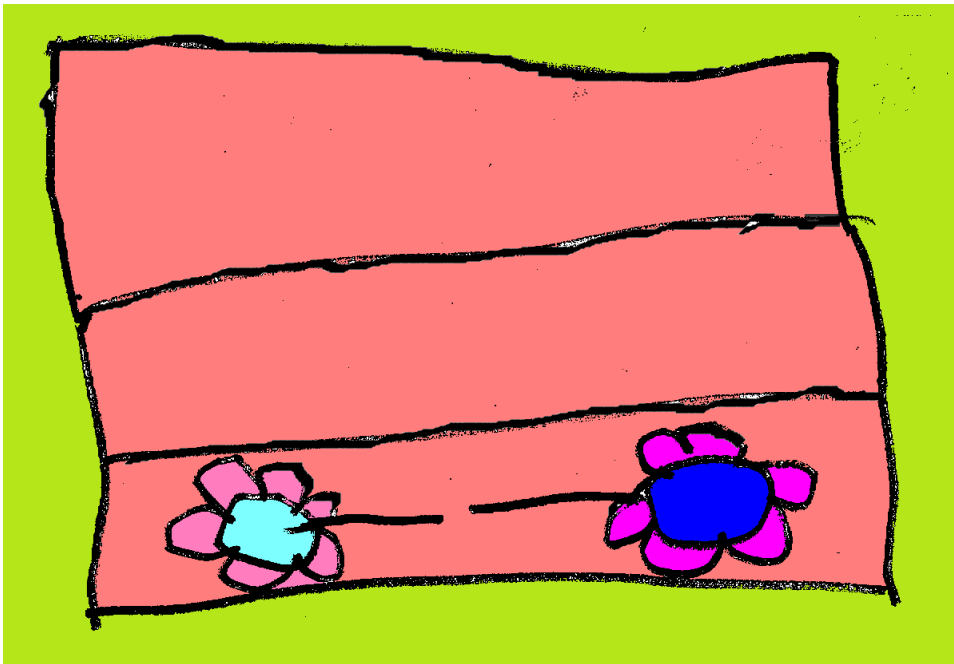

And then Sally had an idea: why doesn't she give them some seeds so they can have a garden? She gave some seeds to the other dinosaurs and it was so so nice. They smiled.

They planted more and more and more. Soon there's flowers all over the place! They loved it and nobody knows how many there were, they just looked at them every single day.

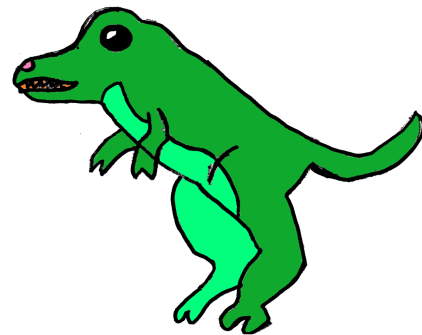

They were so glad Sally gave them seeds.

The pterodactyl delivered flowers on every dinosaur's porch. He smiled when he delivered them.

The T-Rex had flowers on her porch too. Then the T-Rex had an egg! She was so excited because she was going to have a baby T-Rex!
